Dear Ms. Henney, The consumers need some protection from beef, pork, and chicken producers who use antibiotics to make these animals grow faster. Should any of these animals pick up a bacteria and becomes immune to the antibiotic, the consumer gets infected. The antibiotic that the doctor might prescribe just may be immune to the bacteria. Where does that leave the consumer? Please, please ban this use of antibiotics. Or do I have to go to my politicians to get the job done. Let's hope that bureauracracy will do what is right.
